A BIRD'S EYE VIEW

Penny Hernandez

Be sure to read the whole newsletter for the best news. Find the article on the annual picnic, and mark your calendars. New beautiful location, wonderful food, great friends. Check Richard Fowlers conservation column. He always has good things to tell us about. I'm always surprised by the other articles that Arne, the Editor, finds to include in each issue. Jeff Ebright contributes a bunch and hopefully some of you do too. I know Arne asks members to send news to help fill up the pages, and we are actually interested in what you have to say. How did you get into birding? What's the best birding trip you have taken? What trip do you have planned, would you like some suggestions, loan of a bird book of the area, etc.? You might be surprised how people will respond to you and get to know you.

The other thing I want you to look for is an envelope in your mail from Palomar Audubon Society. This is our request for donations to help run the organization: programs, scholarships, Newsletters, etc. are not free. The Board does everything we can to keep expenses down, but as with everything, costs keep going up. I know that there are a lot of requests in your mail, as in mine, but PAS doesn't ask you but once a year, so please give what you can.

Here is to a wonderful Spring and Summer of birding.

CHANGE FOR SHARING TRIP REPORTS

For years we have used YahooGroup PalomaBird for sharing our trip reports and other notices. We have decided to stop using the Yahoo service due to difficulties in supporting it and the lack of support from Yahoo (which may go away in the near future also). We have created a new "listsrv" for sharing trip report via our website, which we will start using on June 1st. The new address will be birding@palomaraudubon.org for submitting reports and notices. To be added to this listsrv, send your email address to our web administrator at palomaraudubon@gmail.com. We will archive reports on the website. There is a search function on the website that you can easily search for past report. We will keep the archive on the YahooGroup for reports done prior to November 2014.

CONSERVATION NOTES

Richard Fowler

STRENGTH IN UNITY

The PAS board has voted to authorize a dollar for dollar match up to $15,000 for the Save 1000 Acres Campaign which will unite PAS with two other conservation groups, The Escondido Creek Conservancy (TECC) and the Friends of Daley Ranch (FODR). As a small environmental group PAS will gain strength through this partnership and together we will have more clout than any one of us alone.

In 2017 we have a unique opportunity to save a green belt in north inland San Diego County for future generations. In spite of unending commercial development in North County, the TECC staff has had incredible success in acquiring and restoring property in the Escondido Creek watershed.

Their vision of restoring the entire watershed is a bold one. It will require the full support of groups like PAS and all of you who love nature. TECC's past successes have inspired many to participate in this effort. However, the battle is not won. Challenges remain and you can still make a difference.

Funds raised by PAS will go immediately into escrow accounts for one of two properties (see the March-April Band Tale for further details). We will be timing our letter of solicitation to you for later this calendar year. Be on alert for a letter with the Palomar logo.

FROM THE NATIONAL AUDUBON WEBSITE

CLIMATE CHANGE EFFECTS ON THE BURROWING OWL

Audubon's climate models predict that by 2080, this diurnal owl species could lose 77% of its current breeding range. Climate change will disrupt its winter range as well, leaving only 33% intact, shifting the remaining 67% elsewhere. The Burrowing Owl is already a species of conservation concern because modern agricultural practices have removed the prairie dogs and ground squirrels that it depends on to provide nesting burrows. Artificial burrows might help stem population declines in the coming decades.

The amount of overlap between the 2000 circle and the 2080 circle indicates how stable the range will be geographically. Lots of overlap means the bird's range doesn't shift much. No overlap means the species will leave its current range entirely.

About This Bird

This comical little raptor is an easily recognized icon of the grasslands and arid regions of western North America and Florida, and is widespread in the Caribbean, Mexico, Central America, and South America as well. This owl uses a variety of hunting methods. It may pursue large insects by hopping or running across the ground, but it also hunts insects and rodents by swooping down from a raised perch or from hovering flight. Hunting by day or night, it tends to take large insects during daylight in warm weather, small mammals at night or in winter. Lives in loose colonies and nests in underground burrows; while capable of digging its own, it often uses an existing hole provided by prairie dogs, skunks, or armadillos, and isn't shy about moving into manmade burrows provided by conservationists. It is migratory in northern portions of its range, and inhabits open, treeless areas wherever it is found—including agricultural fields, golf courses, cemeteries, and airports. Populations are declining in many areas

Ryan Andrews

“Birding Costa Rica: My Camp Selva Verde Adventure”

Palomar Audubon Society has a multifaceted mission, including a community outreach program with several special initiatives. One of these initiatives is our youth scholarship program. In December 2016, we provided a 100% scholarship award for a week-long educational teenager birding camp conducted by the National Audubon Society at Camp Selva Verde in Costa Rica. The recipient of this Young Birder scholarship was Ryan Andrews. Ryan is 17 years old and has been an active member of PAS since age 13. Ryan is an excellent birder and a very active eBird lister. He is looking forward to sharing his good time and great photos with the generous members of PAS who support our scholarship program!

Mark your calendars. Don't miss this one!
